CURRENT POSITION(S)

FWF Erwin Schrödinger Fellowship at Stanford University (Freeman Spogli Institute for International Studies, The Europe Center – Stanford University) and University of Innsbruck

RESEARCH

My research interests are in international political theory, political theory, and international peace and security. I am writing on the international political theory of Realism and the English School and issues of religion, ethics, diplomacy, and agency in international politics. Asking what practical philosophy can contribute to understanding international politics, my research interrogates the philosophical and anthropological roots of political and international political theory and violence, human rights, the agency of individuals, and international organizations and institutions. My interdisciplinary work also focuses on topics of foreign policy, international cooperation, international organizations, and international order.
